

I need to know and believe my Lord is one with authority.

One who rules my heart
with love and humility and, yes, authority.

We can find great hope in the power of Jesus, and when we recognize that nothing can stand against Him.

Today and everyday,
let us pray for a sense of Jesus' authority inside
of us.
Whether it's in worship, fellowship, education, outreach
or evangelism.

When we're in school, with friends,
with our enemies, our co-workers,
our families. In this time of isolation.

At all times. In all circumstances.

When we close our services, and we "walk out the doors
in peace to love and serve,"
we hope our mission, our voice, our actions and our love will show authority.

I don't mean command and control.
I mean that we mean what we say,
we mean what we do,

and that those who encounter and receive the action, the love, the words we offer, will believe and know they come ultimately from the Lord who made us all.

AMEN

Do you remember your favorite teacher?
Think for a moment
about some of the teachers
you have had in the past.

If you're under twelve, this won't be so hard.

We've had good teachers as well as forgettable ones.
There may be more than one.

Since I am the one talking,
I'll tell you about mine.
But I invite you to name your favorite teacher in the comments.
Tell us about them.

Never underestimate the power of a good teacher.
I remember my 10th grade chemistry teacher.
She basically came into class and read to us from the textbook.

Contrast that with my 2nd grade teacher who, on Friday afternoons, put on Michael Jackson's Thriller album during art class
and danced around the room.

Or Miss Dottie, my piano teacher of ten years,
who made me love to play,
and so I did everyday,
and then it became my first career.

Finally...my senior English and writing teacher.
She was fully alive and animated and a little crazy.

Different women, different stages, different approaches.

All with one thing in common:
they taught with authority.
I was under their spell.

Jesus Christ was the savior, messiah, healer and miracle worker...

he was also a great teacher.
In today's Gospel,
Mark gives us a taste of Jesus'
teaching ministry.

The synagogue was the center of religious life for the Jewish people...it still is.

You might visit the temple
in Jerusalem each year, but your local synagogue was where all gathered for worship on the Sabbath.

Worship included prayers,
the singing of Psalms,
readings from the Scripture
and a time of teaching.
Sound familiar?

During worship, not just anyone could get up and start to teach.
You had to be invited.
There were regular rabbis and teachers,
and from time to time there were guest teachers.

If you remember from last week,
Jesus had already begun his public preaching ministry.

The gospel of Luke tells us it was Jesus' custom to go to the synagogue each Sabbath, so it was natural that the ruler of the synagogue might extend an invitation for him to teach.

You may notice that Mark does not tell us what Jesus taught that morning.
(Wouldn't we like to know?)

That's because his emphasis here is not so much on what Jesus taught but rather on how he taught.

And the point Mark keeps making is that Jesus taught with authority.
Our story tells us that the people were amazed at Jesus' teaching.

I don't know what they were expecting when they went to church that morning, whatever it was, something about Jesus' teaching amazed them.

Mark tells us the people were so amazed at what happened,
they couldn't stop talking about it, and the news about Jesus spread quickly.

This was not a typical day at church.
Can you imagine someone who missed that day?
"So, anything interesting happen at synagogue today?"

"Well, let's see...
there was a new teacher in town,
and he was like nothing we'd seen before.
He performed an exorcism.
The evil spirits knew this teacher and obeyed his command.
Sorry you missed it."

We believe Jesus had authority unlike anyone.
He was commissioned by God, filled with the Holy Spirit in Baptism, and chosen to save the world with love.

Jesus was not part God and part man.
He was fully God and fully man, and when he spoke, he spoke with the full authority of God.

Now, can we imagine a day of church with Jesus?
Like watching Picasso paint,
or Beethoven play his own Sonatas.
A day with Jesus.
His words.
His miracles.
That authority.

I'll bet we would all welcome that exchange.
Most of the time when people talk about Jesus, we emphasize the love and the humility and his servant lifestyle—and rightfully so.

Jesus is the greatest example of love, humility and servanthood.

As followers of Jesus
we also recognize the power and authority of Jesus.
